NOTE TO READER

The Yaa?ak'ap Child and Family Wellness Act establishes the legal framework for the exercise of Huu-ay-aht jurisdiction over child and family services for Huu-ay-aht children.

The Yaa?ak'ap Child and Family Wellness Act applies to Huu-ay-aht children in British Columbia, regardless of whether they live on or off treaty lands. It applies concurrently with provincial and federal child welfare legislation. All service providers, including provincial social workers acting in accordance with provincial laws, must comply with the Yaa?ak'ap Child and Family Wellness Act when making decisions about or delivering services to a Huu-ay-aht child and their family.

The Yaa?ak'ap Child and Family Wellness Act is focused on avoiding the need for children to be removed from their families by ensuring that preventative care is readily available and enforcing existing legal requirements that service providers make reasonable efforts to keep children with their families. In particular, the Act promotes prevention by:

- requiring that, except in cases of immediate danger, a court order be made before a child is removed from their parent,
- ensuring that Huu-ay-aht has advance notice and a right to respond when important decisions about Huu-ay-aht children are being made,
- establishing greater rights for Huu-ay-aht to participate in court proceedings involving Huu-ay-aht children, and
- requiring the Huu-ay-aht government to identify and, where feasible, provide supports and services to Huu-ay-aht children and their families if doing so would enable the child to remain in the home.

The Yaa?ak'ap Child and Family Wellness Act also ensures that Huu-ay-aht children in care remain meaningfully connected to their extended families, culture, and Huu-ay-aht community by:

- setting out the rights of Huu-ay-aht children in care, including access to cultural events and traditional foods;
- establishing standards of cultural competency for social workers and non-Huu-ay-aht foster families who work with Huu-ay-aht children, including requiring them to demonstrate knowledge of Huu-ay-aht culture and values and a commitment to maintaining cultural connections, and
- enabling Huu-ay-aht to apply to the court to change a child's placement if such standards are not met.

The Yaa?ak'ap Child and Family Wellness Act also promotes transparency and accountability by creating the role of an independent Child Services Officer who will report to both Executive Council and the People's Assembly on implementation of child and family services.

PREAMBLE

Huu-ay-aht has always had our own laws and traditional ways regarding how Huu-ay-aht children are cared for and protected from harm.

For many years, Huu-ay-aht was prevented from exercising its inherent right of self-government, including over child and family services. Colonial laws, institutions, and practices such as residential schools and the 60s Scoop disrupted these traditional ways and caused significant harm to Huu-ay-aht children, families, and the broader community. Huu-ay-aht seeks to address these harms by enacting our own legislation regarding child and family services, with the goal of ensuring that all Huu-ay-aht children grow up safe, healthy, and connected to their culture and community.

Huu-ay-aht recognizes that the health and well-being of our children, families, and community is interconnected (Hišuk ma c'awak), and that both the Huu-ay-aht government and the Huu-ay-aht people have an important role to play in taking care of our children and families (ʔuu?ahuk).

Through the enactment of Yaa?ak'ap Child and Family Wellness Act, Huu-ay-aht takes another step on our journey of revitalizing and reclaiming our governance structures by exercising our inherent right to care for our own children and families in accordance with our culture, values, and sacred principles.

Huu-ay-aht hereby recognizes the importance of:

- a. providing holistic, wraparound supports to help keep children and families together wherever possible;
- b. ensuring that services are provided to Huu-ay-aht children and families in a culturally competent and culturally specific manner, by service providers who understand and respect Huu-ay-aht culture and values;
- c. fostering and strengthening our children's connections to their culture, extended family, Huu-ay-aht community, and traditional territory, whether they are in or out of care;
- d. promoting accountable and transparent decision-making in relation to Huu-ay-aht children and with respect to the delivery of child and family services;
- e. ensuring that the Nation has a significant role in the provision of child and family services and is meaningfully involved in decision-making regarding Huu-ay-aht children and families; and
- f. ensuring that Huu-ay-aht has a strong voice to advocate for our children and families in child protection proceedings under provincial laws.

The Legislature enacts as follows:
